

Are you considering graduate study in child and family studies?

Apply today!

Department of Child and Family Studies Syracuse University | Falk College

The Department of Child and Family Studies offers a culturally diverse and academically challenging learning environment with classes taught by vibrant, world-renowned faculty.

Our three graduate degree programs focus on issues affecting children, youth and families across varied social, economic and cultural contexts:

- Master of Arts (MA) – advanced training in the study of children and families oriented towards individuals who are interested in working in public and private social organizations and agencies.
- Master of Science (MS) – advanced preparation for those interested in pursuing doctoral studies or social science related careers.
- The Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) – engages students in the highest level of scholarship within their areas of interest, preparing them for an academic or research-oriented career. Through the Future Professoriate Program, doctoral students receive specialized training in preparation for a career in higher education.

A Rich, Diverse Educational Experience

- Students acquire expertise in children’s cognitive, social, and emotional development and their impact on education, health, and well-being, as well family functioning (marriage, parenting, and work-family relations), all from a cultural perspective.
- Students work closely with faculty and are actively involved in research projects across the United States and the world, including China, Cyprus, India, Romania, and Trinidad, and Tobago.

Opportunities for Financial Support

- Doctoral students are supported through graduate assistantships
- Masters students may also be eligible for scholarship support.

To find out more about our programs and admissions requirements, contact us:

Falk College Admissions,
falk@syr.edu
315.443.5555
falk.syr.edu/ChildFamilyStudies